PUBLIC HUMANITIES + DIGITAL HUMANITIES

Chicana Por Mi Raza: Mapping the Hidden History of Chicana Feminism.

Initiated in 2009, the Chicana por mi Raza digital archive is an ongoing multi-sited digital humanities project. The project involves scanning primary archival materials, many of which are in private collections (newspapers, leaflets and other material culture), and conducting, collecting and digitizing oral histories. To date, the Chicana por mi Raza Digital Archive has collected over 7,000 documents and 100 oral history interviews. The archive is housed on a data management platform that makes this collection available via login to researchers, teachers, students, independent scholars, and community education initiatives. Our public website (www.chicanapormiraza.org) provides an interactive access point to the collection, secondary sources documenting the development of Chicana feminist thought, and a set of teaching tools and guidelines.

Museo del Norte: A Museum Without Walls

El Museo del Norte is a collaboration between the UM Latina/o Studies Program and Fronteras Norteñas, a public history organization in Detroit. The project was initiated in 2009 as a community/university conversation about public history and museum practice. Since 2011, El Museo del Norte has sponsored yearly “pop-up museums” and dia de los muertos ofrendas in public spaces throughout Latina/o Detroit. These historical displays are created using community archives and oral history. In 2013, El Museo del Norte acquired exhibition and office space at the Boulevard House, a settlement home project that focuses community development through culture and the arts.
